WELCOME MESSAGE FROM CHAIRPERSON ORGANIZING COMMITTEE

Yet again, we meet as stakeholders to take stock of the journey we committed to achieving women's land rights in Uganda. Key to note is that the journey has been driven by the urgency of a global rush for land and extracted resources and unprecedented urbanization, hastened by the growing impact of climate change and frequency of natural disasters and currently the COVID-19 pandemic. Women have been at the centre of human rights violations regarding their rights and access to land.

Women's equal rights to land and property are grounded in core international and regional human rights instruments that all stress the need to achieve equality in the enjoyment of land and property rights. Including the right to access, use, inherit, control, and own land. Furthermore, the global goals set by the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development recognize women's land rights as an explicit cross-cutting catalyst to ending poverty (Goal 1); seeking to achieve food security and improved nutrition (Goal 2) and achieving gender equality and women's empowerment (Goal 5). Despite all these international support and commitments, women continue to be denied equal rights to access, use, inherit, control, and own land.

We are currently confronted by two biggest challenges of our generation: the COVID-19 pandemic and its consequences, and the unfolding climate change crisis. In both, women are disproportionately affected. It is my humble appeal to all of us, that this conference, will provide an opportunity to rejuvenate our efforts in enhancing women's land rights for a better Uganda. Let this be a defining conference of our time, where we can witness the development of realistic and sustainable commitments that will propel us in a much stronger way to gender equality and will end the discrimination against women and girls.

It is in your hands. I wish us all a successful commemorative 3rd Women's Land Rights Conference 2021.

Thank you!

Bernadette Bakkidde Nakimbugwe Chairperson, Organising Committee 3rd Women Land Rights Conference 2021

BACKGROUND

Land is a form of wealth and basic resource for agriculture which is the backbone of Uganda's economy. According to the Uganda Bureau of Statistics: Agricultural Sector, Gender Statistics Profile (UBOS), agriculture employs about 69% of the population, of which over 50% are women (UBOS, 2012). However, there is a gender gap in land ownership, use and control. Women's land and property rights remain a challenge across the globe. In Africa, it is worsened by the social norms, beliefs and patriarchal attributes of land, legal attachment and recognition of land and property ownership rights.

In Uganda, agriculture is the main economic activity that contributes about 26% of the country's GDP and employs approximately 69% of the population, of which 50% are women (Ali, 2015). However, there is an agricultural productivity gap which is estimated to be at 10.3% (UBOS, 2012). Studies show that the gender productivity gap is partly due to gender gaps that exist in accessing and using agricultural inputs especially land (Hill and Vigneri, 2011). Land is a key resource in agricultural production and yet, according to UBOS (2013), women own only 28%. The World Bank Group: Women, Business, and the Law (WB), indicated that women's property rights are constrained by the legal system which is pluralistic in nature (WB, 2018).

In addition, several other barriers hinder the full realisation of women's land rights including a) limited awareness of women's rights which impedes implementation of women's statutory rights; b) exclusion or underrepresentation of women in land-related institutions; c) inadequate access to justice for women due to inefficient land dispute resolution mechanisms. The study also indicated that the different sources of law are usually in conflict with each other, creating tensions that hurt women's land rights. Therefore, the removal of these constraints faced by women would work to end the gender gaps in agricultural production and promote women's land rights.

Despite Uganda's policy and legal regime relating to access, ownership and control land is adequate, all these have not translated in an increment in women ownership, yet over 70% of women are engaged in Agriculture, less than 20% of them have control over their agricultural output and nationally only approximately 17% of the women own land mainly through purchase. The efforts have been marred by limited resource allocation, corruption, mismanagement of cases, land case backlog, cultures that are compounded with unequal power relations, among others. Women have remained discriminated against and often denied their land rights both ancestral, before marriage, in marriage and out of marriage. "Some cultures still consider women as property to be inherited by men" These have often made rural women and girls more inferior, vulnerable, and marginalised in both public and private spheres. This is coupled with ignorance of the law by women on their land/ property rights and land governance often exhibited during land acquisition/ registration and ownership of land. Often men have sold off land without their spousal consent and in other instances, women act as witnesses in the sale of their land with very minimal information on the implication of their actions to the future of land tenure security.

Article 26 of the 1995 Constitution of Uganda, the 1998 Land Act and the EAC countries provide for women's land rights.

For women to gain ground in land ownership, access and control, there must be gender transformation towards equality. The transformation that leads to sustainable engagements of women in the land governance process, the transformation that challenges the norms and traditions that have held women back in secondary positions as regards land ownership and this transformation must have been observed in ways governments legislate and deliver programmes for women's land rights.

International and Regional frameworks backing women's rights to Land

The National legal framework that protects women's land rights.

Uganda boasts of a progressive legal and policy framework, with the Constitution of the Republic of Uganda (1995) which embodies far-reaching policy and legal reforms aimed at securing women's land rights, advancing gender equality and women's empowerment. Article 21 provides that all persons are equal before the law in all spheres of political, economic, social, and cultural life and every other aspect and shall enjoy equal protection of the law. Article 31 (1) of the Constitution entitles women and men to equal rights during and after marriage including the acquisition of property which may be land during the marriage. The Land Act Cap 227 provides for mandatory representation of women on land tenure governance institutions. The Uganda National Land Policy (2013) has among its core principles, "Equity and justice in access to land irrespective of gender, age, disability or any other reason created by history, tradition or custom."

WHY THE WOMEN'S LAND RIGHTS CONFERENCE

Women have always experienced enormous challenges when it comes to accessing credit in financial institutions because of the lack of collateral like land simply because they do not have land registered in their names. The 2016 National conference aimed at ensuring that by 2025, women attain 30% registered ownership and the members of the WLRM committed to implementing the 10 minimum demands geared towards the fulfilment of the 2025 agenda, therefore, the third Women's Land Rights Conference of 2021 will be a carry forward conversation to: "TRACKING PROGRESS OF WOMEN'S RIGHTS TO LAND IN UGANDA 2016-2021 AND IMPLICATIONS TO NATIONAL SOCIAL ECONOMIC TRANSFORMATION" The planned virtual conference will be a time for self-assessment, how far we have come in this journey five years down the road, what has been achieved, what more can be done to ensure that the 30% is reached for the realisation of women's land rights and security of tenure, what recommitments need to be made, which champions do we need onboard moving forward.

Further, it will also help build consensus at the country level on requisite national level actions for better protection and advancement of women's rights to land that will result in an equitable and transformative change in the land sector. This will aid in the creation of a safe space for women of different social, economic and religious beliefs and backgrounds to dialogue with state and non-state land actors and find amicable solutions to local and national challenges they face with emphasis on their strategic and practical needs considering that women are not a homogenous group, concerns of intersections of women (including; married women, female household heads, widows, rural & urban women, illiterate, educated, the elderly, women with disabilities among others) must be put at the centre of the land debate.

OBJECTIVES AND EXPECTED OUTCOMES

Objectives

- 1. To create a platform for discussion and sharing of their lived experiences between the grassroots women and the duty bearers, this will aim at generating new commitments towards the cause of security of tenure for women.
- 2. To evaluate the progress of the 10 minimum demands that organisations committed to fulfilling for the past 5 years towards the achievement of the 30% registered land in women's name.
- 3. Garner and generate commitments for the Women's Land Rights Agenda 2021.
- 4. Documentation of women's voices and best practices from the 5years implementation.
- 5. Laying strategies on how the WLRM will work for the next 5years.

Expected Results

- 1. A strengthened multi-stakeholder Platform on gender equality on land established and functional.
- 2. A revamped and visible Women's Land Rights Movement inclusive of the ministry focal persons for collaboration to drive the agenda for the next 5 years.
- 3. A recommendation from the WLRM members on the women's land rights agenda.

1:50pm - 2:50pm Gender and Land Documentation Brief: It is evident that land rights documentation goes a long way in offering perceived tenure security to the beneficiaries of the process. Land rights registration on the other hand focuses on the system structures that exist, with approved processes and procedures that in the long run offer actual tenure security to the landowners. It is important to note that the two steps are a linkage to each other as documentation provides a strong platform for adjudication, dispute resolution and boundary demarcation onto which a proper registration system can BREAK AWAY then be built. This session will thus focus on interrogating SESSION the existing legislative frameworks around land rights documentation and/or registration, the existing land documentation and/or registration practices and the existing and emerging challenges and opportunities to scale security of tenure initiatives especially for women and other vulnerable groups of people in Uganda. The session will further explore existing best practices, challenges and opportunities for engendering the land documentation and/or registration processes in ways that fulfill the constitutional human rights principles of equity, equality, participation and non - discrimination. The goal of the session is therefore to come up with key policy and practice recommendations for securing tenure for all through gender responsive and equitable land rights documentation and/or registration.

Gender And Large-Scale Land Based Investments: Implications on women land rights in Uganda

Brief:

BREAK AWAY

SESSION

Women are majorly affected by the largescale land-based investments because women are the primary users of land and provide 80% of agricultural labor force and are responsible for their household food security and welfare, hence have had a survival/ symbiotic relationship with land, therefore land acquisition makes them vulnerable to landlessness and destroy their source of livelihood.

The impact that largescale land-based investments has had on women land rights cannot be ignored. In situations of land acquisition for development, the crops women grow most such as tomatoes, greens, onions among others are not always considered in the compensation list and are normally destroyed without compensation. This puts the women at the risk of food insecurity. This situation is worsened by the fact that women have limited access to information and are less mobilized to engage during consultation and in most times their participation is often reduced to attendance other than voice their interest particularly during negotiations for compensation since men tend to claim ownership of the land. The absence of adequate legal framework to govern land acquisition, resettlement and rehabilitation of project affected persons in Uganda also poses myriad challenges to women land rights. The current Land Acquisition Act is of 1965 and has not been amended to suit contemporary needs of Ugandans, there is no policy on Land acquisition, Rehabilitation and resettlement except the draft that exist and has never been past, Land valuation bill is still lying before parliament. And lastly the country lacks a guideline on Free prior and Informed Consent (FPIC) which guideline could have aided community participation during land acquisition. All this leave the acquisition process more complex than it is.

Presentation:

Building a Customary Land Registry for Uganda: Prospects for Women's Land Rights.

Brief:

Women's land and property rights remain a challenge across the globe. In Africa it is worsened by the social norms, beliefs and patriarchal attributes of land, legal attachment and recognition of land and property ownership rights. The inadequacy of the existing land administration infrastructure can be partly blamed for this. With majority of land in Uganda under customary tenure, it is natural that streamlining any matters on it has serious gender implications. This session will therefore explore how the proposed establishment of a land registry system to support the registration of land rights under customary tenure is likely to impact women's land rights in Uganda.

Issues for Discussion

- Legal status of women's land rights in Uganda and key issues in the existing formal land registration system.
- 2. Importance of a land registry to overall land administration.
- 3. Opportunities and threats of the proposed Customary Land Registry for women's land rights.

...the challenges faced by women in the course of seeking for land justice which limit their enjoyment of land rights include: Corruption in both formal and informal justice systems; customary norms on inheritance support transmission of land to men; delays in adjudication of land cases; lengthy and complex procedures of accessing justice in the formal justice systems; patriarchy/male dominance in traditional justice institutions and Local Council Courts; high costs involved which some women cannot afford; and the Covid 19 pandemic has also limited access to courts of law and other institutions that handle land cases during the lock down and slowed down land dispute resolution throughout the pandemic period.

The session will focus on the following key areas:

- A reflection on the existing Legal and Policy framework promoting Women's Land Rights. Women and inheritance focusing on some proposals within the Succession (Amendment) Bill 2018, The gaps that exist, opportunities and trends that we need to take note of for the laws to be effective.
- How the Courts of Judicature have been instrumental in ensuring access to land justice by women in a bid to secure their land rights. The facilitator will share experience on the effectiveness of the adversarial justice system and alternative dispute resolution mechanisms in promoting women land rights. The session will also highlight the barriers women encounter in navigating the formal courts systems and propose recommendations for addressing the barriers.
- The role of traditional institutions in enhancing women land and justice rights. The session will also highlight challenges, gaps and opportunities for effective service delivery by traditional structures

Presentation: Women's access to land rights in post conflict communities; a socio-economic dilemma

Brief:

Although there has been a sharp increase in the gender and land literature in the past decade, there remains very little literature in the nexus with conflict situations. Issues around women's access to land continue to be the nodal element of discourse on land rights, showing that women are much more prone to being victims of land and property crimes especially in post conflict communities. Although numerous legal frameworks like the Constitution and the Land Act continue to protect women's land rights, in practice there are operational obstacles to realize these notions as seen from findings in ASF's recent study "Access to land and transitional justice in northern Uganda, and to specifically explore the returnees and displaced person's justice paths in claiming land rights". The study was conducted in the districts of Nwoya, Amuru, Kiryandongo, and the city of Gulu.

ABOUT THE WOMEN'S LAND RIGHTS MOVEMENT

The WLRM was reinstated and revived during the 2nd National Women's conference that took place in Uganda in 2016 to continue with the mobilisation and collaboration of about 20 members ranging from civil society organisations, Ministries, Departments, Community based organisations with a common view and understanding of the land rights challenges that affect women. Bearing in mind that women are the major contributors to the social and economic survival and wellbeing of households and communities. Although women are the majority producers of the food we feed on (approximately 80% of agricultural producers), patriarchal norms have bestowed power over land to men and women have a subordinate position which prevents them from enjoying their land rights and participating in land reforms, particularly at a decision-making level.

In addition to the above facts, due to social, cultural, religious norms and stereotypes, women remain overburdened with work; have less time and mobility; have less access to and control over productive resources and therefore less access to and control over the benefits of productive activity (household and personal); have less access to education and training and hence fewer economic options; women have less experience, self-confidence and credibility in public-sphere activity and lack political power. All these inhibit their participation in land governance processes and therefore cannot benefit equitably with men.

To be able to deal with the above issues that inhibit the full enjoyment and realisation of women's land rights, members agreed to set out 10 minimum demands that each of them would contribute to fulfilling in their various organisations for a period of 5 years (2016-2021) which include;

- 1. In full compliance with national, regional, and international aspirations of women 's rights instruments, every land administration decision and action must fully involve women themselves as the rights holders regardless of her birth, age, tribe, social origin/affiliation, religion, marital status, fortune, and political or other opinions.
- 2. Uphold and implement fully the provisions of the CEDAW and the Protocol to the African Demands on Human and People's Rights on the Rights of women in Africa, that enshrine the right to equal access to, ownership and control of land, livelihood, and acceptable living conditions; Agenda 2030; the Voluntary Guidelines on the Responsible Governance of Tenure of Land, Fisheries and Forests as well as the AU Declaration on Land Issues and Challenges in Africa.
- 3. Fully implement Article 26 and 33 of the 1995 Constitution of Uganda which upholds and protect rights to own property and land.
- 4. Ensure good and gender-sensitive land governance including clear instruments for documentation of women's rights to land across all tenure types.
- 5. Improve access to justice for women and provide universal legal aid for women to seek redress for any violations of their land rights.
- 6. Outlaw bad customary and written laws and practices that negatively affect women's tenure security; Institute formal and cultural deterrent mechanisms against individuals, groups or associations of persons, companies or institutions that evict, dispossess, or disinherit women of their land.

- 7. Respect, protect and enforce the right of every woman in Uganda to hold and use land free of fear and violence, for their economic empowerment.
- 8. Regulate businesses and investments so they are accountable for respecting human rights, environmental, social, and labour standards; review public policies that fuel land grabs and replace them with policies that prioritize sustainable land use considering the unique needs of women and other small-scale food producers; and ensure the free, prior & informed consent of all communities affected by land-based investments inclusive of extractives.
- 9. Generate the status of land governance in Uganda using gender indicators to provide evidence and gendered information on land ownership that will be used to close the gender gap in landholding.
- 10. Target women with incentives for land allocation, utilization as well as facilitate land transactions and funding to promote equal opportunities.

Women's Land and Property Rights/ Social Norms Transformation

In 2016, three non-government organizations namely UCOBAC, Pastoral Women's Council (PWC) in Tanzania and Kenya Legal and Ethical Issues Network (KELIN) worked in partnership to explore solutions on how inequitable social norms about Women's Land Rights can be changed. They came up with a curriculum-based intervention designed to change peer norms about women's land rights among men and women in the local communities. This is through the Securing Your Family's Future Course for men and women. (Refer to the photos and link for Video clip). SYFF - https://youtu.be/ICdIYeLGSek

Joyce Adit and Chrisanto Odaga, residents of Zombo Paidha Sub County had been married for over 10 years, and among the assets the family acquired was land for coffee planting which was Chrisanto's full responsibility. Such was the normal which didn't draw Joyce's attention because culturally, women do not have stake in land. Little did she know that the situation paused vulnerability to her and their children, should her husband pass away without her lead on the land.

In 2019, Joyce and Chrisanto took part in a gender training for couples organized by NAWOU and Okoro Coffee Growers Association with support from We Effect. Couples received information that unlike the cultural perspective of men being sole managers of productive resources, it was a non-negotiable right for women too to own, inherit land from parents, pass on land to their children including girls, take part and make decisions in anyland related transaction, have their names appear on the land transaction documents, for joint or individual modalities.

With such wealth of information, Joyce dialogued with Chrisanto about how she could have stake in the coffee plantation to which the husband assented, right from including her in the land documents to managing the plantation and its proceeds. "I am proud to say that my husband and I now make decisions on the land as a couple and my husband is confident that with or without him, I can responsibly take charge of the land for the benefit of our family without interference by relatives; something I am training my children as well," Joyce shared.

FEMALE AND MALE CHAMPIONS

"My name is Alio Margaret, a resident of Aguroi village, Kaberamaido parish, Kaberamaido sub county Kaberamaido district. My brothers came to me and requested me to help them with 2 bulls in exchange of land equavilent of 4 acres worth 2 million shillings, each acre at 500,000 shillings.

When I went for my business, I came back I found that fraudulently my brother Egetu Selestino connived with other clan members and sold my land again to another person. When I attended Awareness Session organized by LANDnet Uganda male champion volunteer, Elilu Brian, I got advice and approached their office located at Magistrate court where my brothers were called for a mediation of which they understood and accepted to compensate me 1.5 million shillings and I bought 3 acres of land.

They also helped me in identifying another land of I resettled to with my children where am now happily staying with my children therefore I appreciate LANDnet Uganda for coming to Kaberamaido to help vulnerable, poor and voiceless women in Kaberamaido may God bless them and UN WOMEN."

Esongu Etadu Julius (on the left) LANDnet male champion Kaberamaido together with the Ilalo Doreen (widow in the story) with the staff of Legal Aid project of Uganda Law Society Kaberamaido clinic after the final Letters of Administration was granted to Ilalo Doreen as a sole Administrator.

Community sensitization by male champions of LANDnet Kaberamaido district has immensely contributed to and resulted to change and reduction in the number of cases of offences resulting from mismanagement and wasting away of the deceased's estate, gender-based violence which may have resulted from the question of marriages, divorce which is connected to property rights. A case in point is a case reported to one of the male champions of LANDnet by Ilalo Doreen who is a widow and Administrator of the estate of her late husband Enayo Simon Cylas. Ecir Simon a co- administrator sneaked and proceeded to the DFCU bank Dokolo Branch without the consent of the widow (co-administrator) to open an estate account with the intention of withdrawing all the money denying the widow her rights.
